TEXT ITA/ENG

The Rainbow family project started in 2008 until 2012, it involved twelve families throughout Italy, and it features a long and complex narrative path that has often crossed Italian borders.

In Bloom, is the result of this project, with the aim of tell the daily life of these families. They all represent the cross-section of a fast social transformation which see, beside the traditional model (mother, father, son), the rise of a new paradigm, with families consisting often of single parents, separated and divorced couples, homosexual parents, unmarried couples, extended family units. Eleonora Calvelli documented their life and their travel, in the daily struggle toward the recognition of their civil rights in Italy. Different stories talking about the difference, the strength and overall the love which shape these families. A vibrant and joyful book, where the photographs underline lightly but never silly such important issue.
